

"It was easy for him to say, 'I will open my barn, I will call together the needy.' But he has no thought of want, only of amassing; for it follows, And he said, This will I do, I will pull down my barns. You do well, for the store-houses of iniquity are worthy of destruction. Pull down thy barns from which no one receives comfort. But if you confessed that those things have come to thee from God, is God then unjust in distributing to us unequally. Why should you abound while another begs?"
